Commentary

The fund rose 0.64% in April, underperforming its Benchmark MSCI Far East local by 1.68%. The positive geographical contribution was positive in Indonesia, South Korea and Japan, but lagged in Hong Kong/China, Thailand, Vietnam and Bangladesh. Sector performance was up in Consumer Goods, Industrials, Technology, but the global uncertainty pushed down commodities and Financials. Economic data across the Asian region remain mixed. China 1Q GDP was positive with a 6.4% growth and its PMI index rose into the expansionary level. Retail continue to remain stable at 8.7%. Japanese data was positive on its April CPO and Q1 large industry Tankan report. Industrial sentiment remains relatedly weak. Market volatility fell further during the month on expectations of a positive outcome in the trade talks. The election in Thailand and Indonesia closed, but final results are still not out. Forecasters expect the current Indonesian President Joko Widodo to retain majority. While, in Thailand, the military friendly coalition is the front runner. This should guaranty the continuity of the current economic programs. We remain positive on current market valuations with a medium term view. Still, the markets continue to trade mostly sideways during the month, awaiting further developments on the trade front.
